WEAK EYES NO LONGER MEAN EXEMPTION

Men With Defective Eyes Will Drive Trucks and Work in Offices.

A new rule has been put into effect regarding the registrants claiming exemption because of defective vision. Dr. Stapp, examining physician for city board No. 1, explaining the new regulation, explained that in the future such men will be classified as "qualified for limited service." They can be used as truck drivers, or, if they have clerical experience, they will be given a clerical position. The registrants who have been placed on the delinquent list for failing to appear before the boards of this city for physical examination on the time set are coming in very slow, and the police have instructions from Commissioner Betterton to keep close watch on them and bring them to the jail, and then they will be examined before the boards for examination.

Instant Hair Stain Better Than Slow "Restorers"

Some folks would have you believe that will restore color to gray, streaked or faded hair without staining it. No such preparation has ever been discovered. There is only one preparation that is entirely free from sulphur, lead, silver, mercury, zinc, aniline, coal tar products or their derivatives. That preparation is called "Brownstone." It is so easy and safe to apply that the wonder is that anyone ever uses anything else. "Brownstone" instantly tints the hair to any shade of brown (or black) that may be desired. If the gray shows on your temples or in streaking your hair—if the ends of your hair are lighter than the balance, or if for any reason you wish to stain all or part of your hair—use "Brownstone." A sample and booklet will be sent you (from manufacturers only) upon receipt of 10c. Mention shade desired. All of the leading drug stores sell "Brownstone." Two sizes, 25c and $1.15. Insist on "Brownstone" at your hair-dresser's. Prepared by The Kention Pharmaceutical Co., 415 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky. Sold and guaranteed in Chattanooga by Jo Anderson, R. J. Miller's Head House Drug Store, People's Pharmacy and other leading dealers.—(Adv.)

NO THOUGHTFUL NEWSPAPER READERS IN AMERICA. LAUGHS JEAN PICARD

French Lieutenant Knocks America in Jest, but Relies on Her in Earnest—People Here Must Be More Intense and Earnest About War.

JEAN ALOIDE PICARD

In an interview at the "Y" headquarters at Camp Forrest, Lieut. Jean Aloide Picard, of the French army, inveighed whimsically against American newspapers and newspaper readers. Lieut. Picard is touring the American training camps in the interest of the war work council of the Y. M. C. A. He received the reporter in his room, where he was wearing a Durham Duplex on his face with great efficiency. He apologized for his lateness, and in the next breath protested strongly against being called an optimist.

"But you think we'll win the war?" protested the interviewer. "Certainly I do," the beche can't win," replied Lieut. Picard. "That may not be optimistic, but it suggests optimism."

"There are two sorts of optimists—the man who sits around and says, 'I'll all come out all right, no use to bother (here Jean Aloide, gave his safety a vicious dig into his cheek, as if he were chopping at such a slacker), and the man who says, 'I'll all come out right because I'll make it come out right.' The latter is the sort of optimist I am."

The reporter suggested that all thoughtful readers would know that by his work. The lieutenant looked at his razor and looked around in astonishment.

"Thoughtful readers!" he ejaculated. "You don't mean there are no thoughtful persons in America?" protested the reporter in surprise.

"No doubt there are, but—are they thoughtful when they read the newspapers?"

Put this way, it looked a bit improbable. However, the interview proceeded in his argument as to the possibility of a thoughtful American reader. Lieut. Picard dismissed the whole contention with the brief laugh of a confident man.

"American newspaper readers are divided into three classes," he analyzed briefly. "Three-fourths look only at the cartoons, one-fourth at the headlines and one-fourth read the sporting page."

"But that makes too many fourths," protested the interviewer; "that's five-fourths."

"Ah, America is a big country," explained the Gaul.

Knows Newspaper Game. It turned out that Lieut. Picard really knew whereof he spoke, as he has been a publisher in France and a newspaper man in New York. Any one could tell that he had been a journalist by that characteristic neck stoop all newspaper men acquire. He is a small man, with prominent quick brown eyes and a thin, bronze-colored mustache. He spoke English with characteristic French accent, as if all his vowels were somehow compressed and filed to a point. One when he mispronounced a word too badly he spelled it out.

When asked what he meant to say to the people of Chattanooga next Sunday, Lieut. Picard said:

"I want to tell them the supporting trenches in this war are just as important as the first line trenches. I fear for these supporting trenches. The lieutenant's humor seemed into whimsical seriousness. 'I am going to scold the people of Chattanooga. The cities of America are the supporting trenches for the American boys in the first line. Unless all America realizes this is really war, unless the folk in these American cities are willing to sacrifice as freely, as bravely, as the boys they sent 'over there'—here he paused, put down his razor and added crisply, 'but they will.' He was an optimist to the last."

It is of interest to note that Jean Aloide Picard spent twenty-eight months in the trenches in France. Disabled there, he is still fighting the war from the lecture platform. The lieutenant's humor seemed into whimsical seriousness. "I am going to scold the people of Chattanooga. The cities of America are the supporting trenches for the American boys in the first line. Unless all America realizes this is really war, unless the folk in these American cities are willing to sacrifice as freely, as bravely, as the boys they sent 'over there'—here he paused, put down his razor and added crisply, 'but they will.' He was an optimist to the last."

Lieut. Picard speaks at the following places during his tour of the United States: Thursday—At 3 p.m., Civic Center theater; at 7 p.m., at "Y" 24 to the Eleventh infantry.

Friday—At 3 p.m., Civic Center theater; at 7 p.m., at main "Y" auditorium, Camp Forrest.

Saturday—At 7 p.m., main "Y" auditorium.

Sunday—At 3 p.m., at community concert, courthouse, Chattanooga.

WILL ANGEL KILLED BY SOUTHERN TRAIN

Will Angel, conductor on a motor car working on the Western Union line, north of Oake, was killed Wednesday evening about 6 o'clock by a southbound Southern passenger train. The accident happened near Annadel. The crew of six other men on the car with Angel made their escape without injury. The crew reported here this morning to J. C. Wheelock. These men stated that while going north they were met by passenger train No. 5 on a sharp curve at the south end of the cut and the Western Union men got off their car and were trying to take it from the track, and seeing they could not do so without endangering their lives they left the car and Angel remained, tugging with it, to remove it from the track when the train killed him. Mr. Angel is known to many railroad men in Chattanooga, having been extra passenger conductor here. He was said to be a very safe man on the road, and was expressed that he should remain with the car in face of danger.

"I have been a sufferer with bronchial asthma for about ten years and would suffer so badly with it that I would sometimes have to sit up in bed to get my breath," says Mr. C. L. I think that Lung-Vita is a wonderful medicine for bronchial asthma. My wife is also taking Lung-Vita with good results." Lung-Vita is sold by druggists and dealers.—(Adv.)

SUFFRAGISTS OF NEW YORK PLEASSED

Registration Figures in Four Congressional Districts Equal Vote Cast for Mayor.

New York, Feb. 28.—Suffragists rejoiced this week over the registration of the new women voters in the four congressional districts where special elections will be held March 5. Miss Mary Garrett Hay, chairman of the city suffrage party, said:

"We are delighted. Politicians of all parties assured us that a fair estimate of the registration of women would be the total vote for the mayor in those four districts. This was, roughly, 41,000, and the number of women who registered was more than 37,000. With only five hours on one day, and that a holiday, and one whole day, which was a Jewish Sabbath, I think we did wonders."

"The time was so short that we were unable to do the thorough work in the districts necessary to inform the women of their duty and their opportunity. I did not believe we could count on more than 20,000 or 25,000, in view of the obstacles. It is a proof that women do want the vote."

Miss Adeline Sterling, corresponding secretary of the city suffrage party, caused a stir when it was announced that she had been sworn in as democratic inspector at No. 3155 Broadway, the Fourteenth assembly district of the Thirtieth congressional district. As the suffrage party officers were pledged to align themselves with no party, it was inferred that Miss Sterling had endangered her official standing. It was learned yesterday, however, that Miss Sterling merely acted as a substitute inspector for one day and has enrolled with no party.

Seventeen citizenship courses are in full swing under the suffrage party, with ten classes at night in public schools and an addition of twenty-two lectures on the subject.

WOMAN'S DEVOTION TO HOME

Home duties to many women appear more important than health. No matter how ill they feel, they drag themselves through their daily tasks, overdo and pay the penalty in headaches, backache, dragging-down pains and nervousness; they become irritable, and finally discover that some form of female complaint has fastened itself upon them. When a woman gets into this condition there is one tried and true remedy made from the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than forty years has continued its great work among women in restoring health after many other remedies have failed.—(Adv.)
